TEACHING EXPERIENCE:

Widener University School of Law (1989-present):

Taught Torts, Advanced Torts, Appellate Advocacy, Constitutional Law, Defamation Law, Agency, Products Liability, and Professional Responsibility.

Selected "Outstanding Teacher" by the Graduating Class of 1995; First Recipient of the Outstanding Teacher Award as selected by the Alumni in 2000; Recognized for Outstanding Scholarship in 2006.

Student Evaluation Scores for all courses have been "very good."

Ran an academic support program that retained ninety-five per cent of all entering students that Widener had identified as "high risk."

Coached ABA Moot Court teams that reached national qualifying round four years in a row (final 32 out of 125) and qualified for Nationals (final 16) in three of those years. One of these teams was recognized for writing the third best brief in the nation and had the seventh best advocate. Teams won best brief in the region two years in a row, and two other teams had the third best brief in the region.

AALS Section Executive Committee on Professional Responsibility (2000-2004); Section Chairperson Elect (2002); Section Chairperson (2003); Section Newsletter Editor (2005-present).

Appointed Full Professor in 1999.

University of Pittsburgh School of Law 1987-89:

Taught large section of Torts and upper division classes in Advanced Criminal Procedure, and Legal Writing and Advocacy.

Student Evaluation Scores for all courses were "very good."

University of Pittsburgh School of Law 1984-87:

Director, Mellon Legal Writing Program: Designed Experimental Writing Program; Taught three sections of writing and research a week; coordinated six student teaching fellows; and taught a training course for twenty-six second year students to become teaching fellows.

The fifty-one minority students who were part of the program had an eighty percent law school graduation rate and a seventy percent first-time bar passage rate.

Harvard Summer School Summers, 1983-88: Designed and taught a legal writing course for undergraduates. Students drafted pleadings, discovery documents, memos, a short brief, and a statute.

In Student Evaluation Scores, the course ranked among the top ten percent of Harvard Summer Classes for six straight years.

Villanova School of Law 1983-84: Designed research and writing problems and taught three legal writing sections.

Harvard Law School 1981 through Fall 1983: Legal Methods Program: Taught one section of legal writing for two years; spent one year coordinating the legal methods program for Professor C. Clyde Ferguson and then spent nine months redesigning the program.
