				You are responsible for reading the entire set of class readings, but when you come to class you should physically bring the smaller set of readings marked "bring" so you can reference them in class. You may 'bring' them on your computer, on a Kindle/Ipad/Android reader, or in hard copy - whatever works best for you.	THE TWEN READINGS.. THE BALANCE OF THE TWEN READINGS WILL CARRY INTO CLASS 2. Things to think about for the first class: Why is the burden of proof in criminal cases so much higher than in civil cases? Why does our system give the jury the power to set free a person who, according to the facts and law, is guilty of a crime? For class 1, be prepared to be called upon to discuss the problems at pp. 1-5 of the TWEN readings. For class 2, make sure to write the one paragraph explanation requested at page 22. You must bring the paragraph to class #2, and be prepared to read your proposed instruction to the entire class. 2. One final note. In the classroom students will be assigned to groups of 4 or 5. There will be group assignments [in class]. The first class TWEN readings has such an assignment.

The remaining 12 sessions will be divided into 4 3-week clusters - one each on HOMICIDE, RAPE, DRUG PROSECUTIONS and CHILD SEXUAL ASSAULT. The sixteen students in the class will be divided into groups of 4, one 'team' for each topic. In each 3-week cluster, the first class will be a lecture by the Professor, followed by a 15-minute lecture by each team members on a topic within his/her team's subject-matter, which will then become his/her paper. The 2nd class in the cluster will involve the analysis/dissection of a case file; and in the 3rd class the four student team members will try a case, with the remaining students serving as witnesses and/or jurors. The first cluster is HOMICIDE. 4 students need to volunteer to be the homicide 'team' prior to the end of 2013, so that lecture topics can be selected. FIRST ASSIGNMENT: This course has a TWEN webpage. Students must register promptly. On the TWEN page read, analyze and outline the materials in pages 1-99 of the materials titlde "class 1-2 readings." By "analyze" I mean that you should identify the critical concepts (2-3) per reading, and have brief notes of each. Pay particular attention to the hypothetical that begins the materials, United States v. Henderson and be prepared to discuss this problem with a critical analysis of the evidentiary issues it raises. Students who will be the "homicide team" [the 4 students who will be making paper presentations on a topic related to the law of homicide] must have initial outlines of their talks to submit to the Professor.
